Slag hour Tips

1. Eat health, sleep adequate & Be optimistic.
2. Revise your strong areas in subjects. Don't practice any thing new.
3. For reference go through latest previous JEE(Main) question papers.
4. Attempt online mock tests. NTA is offering few JEE mock tests on its website <https://nta.ac.in/quiz>
5. Go through the result analysis the your mock tests to understand and improve your weak areas.
6. Be aware of latest JEE(Main) 2020 question papers. It consists of 25 questions per subject in which 20 question are single answer objective type and 5 questions are numerical value type. In this type of questions, you can type your answer (whether it is a single integer or decimal point) using your computer mouse and numerical touch pad.

Exam Day Behaviour

- i) JEE(Main) examiners ensure absolute silence in the exam hall. If any kind of noice, gestures, weird behaviour or any impersonating act by a student might attract debar from the exam.
- ii) Occupy your seat at least 5 – 10min before your exam time.
- iii) Fill in all your details properly before you begin you test.
- iv) Read all the instructions careful.
- v) Assess the question paper as per its standard and flag those questions which are form your strong area.
- vi) There is no particular order to attempt the question, you can pick any order of subjects, but spend reasonable amount of time on every subject. Ensure you don't spend more than 1hour duration to any particular subject.
- vii) If you find any subject difficult, please understand that you are not alone, you quickly shift over to the subject and solve and many questions as possible in other subjects.
- viii) Single answer objective type of question carry negative marks hence no guess-work. However numerical value based questions may not attract any negative marks (Read instructions & clarify on this during the exam)
- ix) Ensure that you stay allotted time in the exam hall. Don't rush to complete the exam.
- x) Review your answers 10-15 minutes before your finishing time and also verify your details before submitting the exam.
